Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Correspondence and Speeches of Mr. Peter Rylands, Vol. 2: With a Sketch of His Career; Speeches The increase acknowledged by the Foreign Office as having taken place since 1851 is as follows: - Upon embassies, 14,000; first-class missions, 3,550; and upon second-class missions, 3,575; making a total of 21,525. In each of these cases the increase has arisen in consequence of the disregard shown to the resolutions of the Committee of 1850. That Committee wished to reduce the embassies to France and Turkey to the rank of missions, but instead of that the Foreign Office have raised the missions to Russia, Austria, and Prussia to the rank of embassies, at an increased annual charge of 10,250. Another recommendation of the Committee was that no salary should exceed 5,000; but we are now paying our Ambassador to France 10,000; Turkey, 8,000; Russia, 7,800; Austria, 8,000; and Prussia, 7,000. These items alone show an excess beyond the amount recommended by the Committee of 15,800 per annum. The Foreign Office, in the Return now presented, justify this expenditure...
